Programming Policy

The Irondale Public Library offers a wide variety of recreational, cultural and educational programs for both children and adult patrons. Programs vary in content and may not be suitable for all patrons.

Please be advised that each person is responsible for selecting appropriate programs for themselves. Likewise, parents are responsible for judging the suitability of any program for their child. While we take care in selecting performers that appeal to a wide audience, the Library is unable to censor the language or viewpoint of a hired performer.

The Library does not endorse or condone any personal viewpoints of its performers. The Library seeks to offer programs that provide a broad range of differing viewpoints, popularity, and/or interests to its patrons. We welcome suggestions. External groups or individuals who wish to provide programs at the library for the public are encouraged to reserve a meeting room for such purposes.

Programs are not limited to Irondale residents. Some programs will be restricted by age. Many programs are limited to a certain number of participants. Some of these programs may require registration or be offered on a first-come, first-served basis. Seating capacities will be enforced.

A current calendar of activities is available at the library and online.
